WOMEN INVOLVED IN GREAT MURDER CASES OF NATION

RESUME SHOWS ETERNAL TRIANGLE AT BOTTOM OF NEARLY ALL OF LEADING TRAGEDY CASES OF TODAY

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 24—Nearly all the tragedies which stand out as dramatic spectacles in the news of America today present women in the leading role. They have their stand in six sections of the country.

Six sensational murder cases, five with women as defendants are in various cities of the country. Another woman, "Peggy" Beal won freedom from a jury in Kansas City last night and a seventh, Madeline Obenchain awaits her third trial in Los Angeles.

Most of the cases present the "eternal triangle" with variations. The following cases are among the most prominent:

Los Angeles—Arthur Burch of Evanston, Ill., faces his third trial on a charge of killing J. Belton Kennedy. Eight men and four women constitute the jury, two women as alternate jurists. Madeline Obechain awaits her third trial on the same charge.

Los Angeles—A jury to try Mrs. Clara Phillips accused of putting Mrs. Alberta Meadows to death with a hammer, is tentatively completed. Mrs. Meadows was an alleged rival for the love of Mrs. Phillips' husband.

Philadelphia—Mrs. Katherine Rosier, accused of killing her husband, Oscar Rosier and his stenographer, Mildred Reckitt, faces trial for the murder of Miss Reckitt.

Hackensack, N. J.—George Cline, motion picture director, Alice Thornton and Charles Sullivan, brother-in-law of Cline, are in a joint trial for the murder of John Bergen, motion picture actor. The defense began its testimony today.

Cleveland, O.—Mrs. Mabel Champion, 22, is on trial for the alleged slaying of Thomas O'Connol, carnival promoter.

White Cloud, Mich.—Mrs. Mida Hodell, on trial for the kiling of her father with poison, repudiated a previous confession, declaring that the confession was obtained by threats of being haunted by the spirits of her father and husband. Romi.

Would Stop Traffic While Fire Apparatus Passes

A request for an ordinance to compel all vehicular traffic to come to a complete stop while fire department equipment is passing on the way to a fire will be requested by Fire Chief August Miller at the next meeting of the common council.

Speaking of the measure which he will sponsor, Chief Miller said that such regulation would do much to eliminate the danger of accidents, and would also prevent possible delay in reaching fires. Under the proposed law, all vehicles of every description will be required to pull to the side of the street and stop as soon as the fire department approaches, thus leaving the streets clear.

Chief Miller has also prepared a new arrangement of fire whistles, which he believes will prove more satisfactory than the one now in use. Under the new plan, if adopted, one long whistle will signify a fire in the east side business district, two long the west side business district, three long, the east side residence district and four long the west side residence district. After the fire is out one long blast of the whistle will be blown. The present system of signals for fires in the various wards has resulted in considerable confusion because of difficulty in counting the blasts and lack of knowledge of the location of the various wards.

In connection with these changes, Chief Miller is planning a campaign of education to acquaint the public with the laws governing fires and fire prevention.

Nekoosa Man Fined

Neil Crowns of Nekoosa paid a fine and costs totaling $20.13 in Judge W. H. Getts' court this morning on a charge of being drunk and by George Hinckley, chief of police of Nekoosa.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Philleo motored to Oshkosh Sunday. They returned Monday afternoon.

Teach Community Leadership Thru Conference Here

A conference designed to teach people of the cities and rural districts community leadership and community attitude is scheduled for Wisconsin Rapids on Nov. 18 and 19. This conference is being called by County Agent Peterson in conjunction with the various other agencies of community work such as churches, schools, clubs, breeders organizations and societies interested in better citizenship. Representatives from all sections of the county are invited to cooperate and there will be delegates from rural districts assisting as sponsors.

Hear Big Men

Although nothing more definite than the dates have been decided, it is probable that the meeting will be held either in the Training School or the high school. Prof. Gordon, noted community song leader from the University of Wisconsin, and Prof. J. C. Elson, famous as a community builder and director of community games, also from the University will be main speakers of the program with other speakers from the county and this district.

Those To Cooperate

All churches in the county, rural and city schools and teachers, various clubs and civic bodies from the cities and representatives of the various county clubs and organizations are going to cooperate in the big two day course. Rural schools will be dismissed on Friday during the conference to allow the rural school teachers to attend.

These community conferences and courses have been very successful in Wausau, Medford and throughout the state. Plans are being laid for a similar conference at Marshfield on Dec. 1 and 2.

Radio Concert To Precede Lyceum Tomorrow Evening

Under the direction of Mr. Harper of the Physics department a new radio outfit has been installed at the Lincoln high school. The outfit is equipped with a Magnavox, or "loud speaker," and broadcasting stations as far away as Atlanta, Georgia, have been plainly heard with the apparatus.

The Magnavox is to be installed in the assembly room, and prior to the concert by the Smith-Spring-Holmes company tomorrow evening a preliminary radio convert will be given featuring selections from many of the leading broadcasting stations.

Attend Conference

C. H. Imig of Rudolph and Co. Agent R. A. Peterson left today for Madison to attend a three day conference on "Feed for Profit", given at the college of agriculture for extension agents, farmers' institute speakers, and county agents.

Say Progressives Not Entitled To Claim Of Credit

Louis Arnold, Socialist candidate for governor, in an address at the Princess Hall last night asserted that Wisconsin's great record of legislation along economic lines, for which Senator La Follette and the progressive faction of the Republican party have been claiming the credit, was in reality the accomplishment of the Socialist members of the state legislature, who first sponsored such measures as the minimum wage law, the industrial compensation act, and laws regulating the hours and conditions of child and female labor. Mr. Arnold, who is a former state senator, also attacked Governor Blaine's straddling attitude on the question of prohibition, and devoted considerable time to a discussion of the Socialist position in the war.

Says Record Undeniable

"It is an undeniable fact," Mr. Arnold stated, "that practically all of the purely economic legislation to which the progressive Republicans have been pointing with so much pride was the accomplishment of the small Socialist representation in the legislature. These bills were first introduced by Socialists, and were sponsored by them until after years of delay, enough votes were won for them to obtain their passage." He said the Socialist party was flatfooted in its favor for beer and light wines.

Says Draft Unconstitutional

Mr. Arnold attacked congress for passing the selective draft measure during the war and said that their acts abridged constitutional rights of citizens. He said Socialists did not want war but since there had been a war the soldiers should receive compensation. He attacked the ship subsidy, the present system of profits in coal industry and denounced the private management and ownership of railroads.

"Justifiable Homicide" Is Verdict Of Coroner's Jury

(By Associated Press)

Fresno, Cal. Oct. 24.—George T. Harlow, who the coroner's jury held to have committed "justifiable homicide" when he clubbed his 19 year old wife toi death after he had found her with a young man in their home early Sunday, will be tried for manslaughter, District Attorney Dailey announced today. The district attorney drew a complaint yesterday which he expects to file today.

H. S. Blanchard, 19, said to have been the youth who was with Mrs. Harlow, was arrested yesterday and sentenced to ninety days in the county jail for disorderly conduct.

Harlow was arrested despite the coroners verdict and is being held in the county jail today. He is thirty years old and has been employed at a power house.

11 PER CENT OF THOSE EXAMINED WERE TUBERCULAR

WISCONSIN ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS ASS'N. SENDS REPORT OF FREE CHEST CLINIC FINDINGS IN COUNTY

The results of the free chest clinic at Wisconsin Rapids, Port Edwards and Nekoosa appears in a report from the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Ass'n received here today. It is as follows:

"Nearly three hundred people were examined at the clinics held in Port Edwards, Nekoosa, and Wisconsin Rapids last week under the joint auspices of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association and local organizations. At Wisconsin Rapids, 138 examinations were made and 16 cases of tuberculosis found. This ratio of 11 per cent tuberculous is about the average proportion prevailing throughout the state in places where clinics have been conducted by the state tuberculosis association.

Many Other Defects

"In addition to tuberculosis many other defects were found. Among other things 76 of the patients were referred to physicians of their own choice for observation of tonsils, four had heart diseases, 14 chronic asthma. In each instance an attempt was made to direct the patient to the treatment which would mean restoration to health.

39 Were Exposed

"According to the records, 39 people gave a history of having been in close contact with a tuberculosis patient. The large number of so-called "contact cases" indicates a growing realization on the part of the public of the desirability that any one who has at any time been in contact with tuberculosis secure a thorough chest examination at regular intervals. The large number of people who applied for examination at the clinics show a demand for this kind of service in Wood county. This is the second time clinics have been held there. In a number of places in the state, chest clinics are held at regular intervals either every six months or every year. In this way, patients examined at one of the clinics and whose condition the doctor is desirous of watching, are enabled to return again and again for examination.

Those Assisting

The local women who assisted the examining physicians include: Mrs. Anna Clancy, Miss Ruth Bennett, Miss Ella Haessler, Miss Farrel, Mrs. J. B. Arpin, Mrs. J. K. Goodrich, Mrs. Aug. Gottschalk, Mrs. Julius Winden, Mrs. Guy Babcock and Miss Amelia Schroedel.

Perfect Plans For Local Drive Of Salvation Army

Plans for the annual Salvation Army drive in eastern Wood County were made at a meeting of the executive committee for this district yesterday. Dr. F. X. Pomainville will again have charge of the drive in Wisconsin Rapids, and F. X. Grode and C. A. Jasperson will direct the work in Nekoosa and Port Edwards respectively. Last year $1,800 was raised in this district, and the committee is confident of realizing at least as great a sum this year.

It was pointed out that at the present time as never before some agency is needed to meet the grave responsibility which present industrial and social conditions imposed upon society and that the Salvation Army is exceptionally well equipped by character and experience to render a service in evangelization and in industrial, economic and social relief, that makes it a tremendous force for good.

JURY VISITS THE ROCHELEAU FARMS

SEE SITES ON BIRON FARMS WHERE DAMAGES ARE CLAIMED BY LANDOWNERS AGAINST CONSOLIDATED COMPANY.

The jury hearing the case of O. J. Rocheleau and W. B. Rocheleau against the Consolidated Water Power & Paper Co. were ordered to visit the Rocheleau farms near Biron yesterday to view the property owned by the plaintiffs where it is claimed that the wate rlevels maintained by the local mill company have caused them considerable damage. The plaintiffs allege property damages which will aggregate $40,000.

Says Land is Ruined

O. J. Rocheleau contends that the raising of the water tables by the defendant company when they raised the dam at Biron has caused a complete loss of the value of his property and seeks damages for the loss of value and for the depreciation in the value of his buildings and improvements.

W. B. Claims 75 Per Cent

On the stand in his own behalf this afternoon W. B. Rocheleau declared that the loss of value to his land due to the raising of the water table from 19 feet to 21 feet by the company has caused him a loss of 75 per cent of the value of the land and that he has suffered a large loss to his buildings and cattle as a result of the flooding of his land.

Defense is Next

The plaintiffs called state drainage experts and others to testify to loss sustained by flooding of the land and will close their part of the case this afternoon. The defendant company has not called witnesses for the defense as yet. Atty. W. E. Atwell of Stevens Point appears in behalf of the Rocheleaus, and Goggins, Brazeau & Goggins for the defendant.

Parent-Teachers To Meet At Stevens Point Tuesday

A conference of Parent-Teachers association of the Eighth congressional district will be held at the Presbyterian church at Stevens Point Tuesday, October 31, at which time plans for the formation of a district council of the associations will be formulated.

The conference will open with a luncheon at 12:30, after which there will be a program featured by an address by Mrs. George M. Tremper of Kenosha, state president of the association. Mrs. Minnie Bibbe of Stevens Point will open the program with a vocal solo, after which Miss Van Camp of Stevens Point will give an address of welcome, to which Mrs. G. M. Hafenbrack of Port Edwards will respond. There will be short addresses by the association chairmen of all the counties in the district, including Wood, Portage, Waupaca, Waushara, Shawano and Marathon.

Michigan Lion Tracked To Lair By Reporter Proves Only a Dog

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Oct. 24—The Michigan "lion" which has aroused the dune country in southeast Michigan since last Thursday has been tracked to his lair and is a dog, according to a reporter of the Chicago Daily News, it was said today.

The News reporter, after several days of fruitless search for a new trail of the lion, came upon footprints resembling those found near Lakeside and followed them.

At length the sleuth, after inquiries at many farm houses, found Adolph Whitemeyer, living in a hut near the edge of the woods of Berrien county where many folks last saw the animal. Mr. Whitemeyer admitted that he had a dog unusually large. The dog is of great size with long thick hair, especially thick on the neck, and the end of its tail is tufted with white hair on the end.

It appeared to be ferocious at first but the reporter observed a wagging tail and soon was on terms with the animal even tickling its ears while taking a print of its feet.

Its feet were found to correspond with the prints found near Lakeside.

Famous Dallas Jurist Condemns Teacher - Critics

Robert E. Lee Saner, prominent Dallas, Texas, lawyer and member of the American Bar Ass'n, addressed the gathering at the Hotel Witter following the campaign address of Mrs. Jessie Jack Hooper. Mr. Saner, who came within three votes of being chosen president of the American Bar Ass'n is regarded as one of the leading American jurists on constitutional law and stands high in his profession throughout the nation. He spoke on the constitution and declared that he did not object to people exercising their rights of free speech by wishing to alter the American Constitution if they could muster enough sentiment and crystalize enough sentiment to make the change. He denounced the state universities and colleges, however for keeping teachers on their pay rolls who injected into the minds of students idle speculation as to wheher the constitution is right and just.

Government by Law

"This is a government of laws, not a government of people," Mr. Saner said, "and laws must be respected in order to have government. People will change laws if they do not like them but there should never be a dangerous practice of disobeying laws as a means of changing them." He attacked members of Congress and Senator La Follette especially for attempting to do away with the powers of the courts especially the Supreme Court.

Justice to Many

He said that the greatest justice to all men comes through courts and he said that one thing the American Constitution provided the citizens of this country were tribunals of justice "Few people know how many thousands of cases are brought before courts of justice every year and men's rights granted them under the constitution are safeguarded in that manner."

Mr. Saner also stated that constitutional measures were not alone the subject of idle speculation but many university teachers were questioning the present marriage laws and conventions and the religious beliefs of centuries.

50 Degrees Above Was Recorded Here Monday

The highest temperature recorded here yesterday was 50 degrs. A year ago on the same date it was 60 degrees. The sun rose at 6:21 a. m. and will set at 5:07 p. m.

Fair weather for this season will prevail in this district, westward to the Rockies for the next 48 hours, but considerable cloudiness. The temperature is above normal in the eastern half of the country but cool weather prevails over the Rocky Mountain region.

Indications are generally fair today and tomorrow; somewhat cooler tomorrow.

GLASGOW WILL BE SCENE OF FIRST POLITICAL CLASH

LLOYD GEORGE AND LAW BOTH PLAN SPEECHES AT SCOTTISH METROPOLIS; EXPECT CABINET ANNOUNCEMENT

(By Associated Press)

London, Oct. 24—Glasgow will be the chief center of interest in the political situation for the rest of the week. The new Premier Andrew Bonar Law on Thursday will announce details of his policy there and forty-eight hours later former Premier Lloyd George will address a meeting, being accompanied by Sir Robert Horne, who is chancellor of the exchequer.

The Times' political correspondent, emphasizes the importance of the situation at Glasgow, which he says is due to the strength of the communist party among industrial workers, adding that this is largely on account of the reluctance of Glasgow members of Parliament to abandon the coalition.

Expect Cabinet Personel

Premier Bonar Law is believed to have submitted his cabinet to the king and the announcement of its composition is expected late today or tomorrow. The new prime minister is said to have advised the king to dissolve parliament, and the privy council is expected to be called for this purpose within a day or two.

Rumor Election Trick

Some reports say Mr. Bonar Law is planning to hold the election on Nov. 15, instead of Nov. 18, in the hope of cutting down the votes of the Labor party and the Liberals. Nov. 18 falls on Saturday, which is the best day for all classes to go to the polls, as election days are not holidays in this country, and the holding of the election in the middle of the week would deprive many thousands of working and business men of a chance to vote. It is possible that this trick may cause a wave of sentiment against the Tories.

Rapids Delegates Return From Legion Convention

The state of Wisconsin was well represented at the national convention of the American Legion at New Orleans, and carried off its share of honors, according to the report of the Wisconsin Rapids delegates who returned yesterday. Dr. F. X. Pomainville, Fred Schnabel, Reginald MacKinnon of this city, and Jerome Farrar of Port Edwards attended the convention. Ed. LaVigne, formerly of Wisconsin Rapids and now connected with the U. S. Shipping Board was also present.

Special trains from thirty states carried about 100,000 legion men from all parts of the country to the convention. Wisconsin had a representation of about 400 including the Beaver Dam legion band, which placed third among the bands at the convention, and Racine Drum Corps, which took first place.

Features of the convention were the address by Samuel Gompers in which he asserted that the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor were both pledged to the common cause of true Americanism and an attack by Judge K. M. Landis on the action of the city of New Orleans in obtaining a special injunction forbidding the sale of liquor while the convention was in progress. He termed this action an insult to the American Legion.

Perfect Plans For Local Drive Of Salvation Army

Plans for the annual Salvation Army drive in eastern Wood County were made at a meeting of the executive committee for this district yesterday. Dr. F. X. Pomainville will again have charge of the drive in Wisconsin Rapids, and F. X. Grode and C. A. Jasperson will direct the work in Nekoosa and Port Edwards respectively. Last year $1,800 was raised in this district, and the committee is confident of realizing at least as great a sum this year.

JURY VISITS THE ROCHELEAU FARMS

SEE SITES ON BIRON FARMS WHERE DAMAGES ARE CLAIMED BY LANDOWNERS AGAINST CONSOLIDATED COMPANY.

The jury hearing the case of O. J. Rocheleau and W. B. Rocheleau against the Consolidated Water Power & Paper Co. were ordered to visit the Rocheleau farms near Biron yesterday to view the property owned by the plaintiffs where it is claimed that the wate rlevels maintained by the local mill company have caused them considerable damage. The plaintiffs allege property damages which will aggregate $40,000.

Says Land is Ruined

O. J. Rocheleau contends that the raising of the water tables by the defendant company when they raised the dam at Biron has caused a complete loss of the value of his property and seeks damages for the loss of value and for the depreciation in the value of his buildings and improvements.

W. B. Claims 75 Per Cent

On the stand in his own behalf this afternoon W. B. Rocheleau declared that the loss of value to his land due to the raising of the water table from 19 feet to 21 feet by the company has caused him a loss of 75 per cent of the value of the land and that he has suffered a large loss to his buildings and cattle as a result of the flooding of his land.

Defense is Next

The plaintiffs called state drainage experts and others to testify to loss sustained by flooding of the land and will close their part of the case this afternoon. The defendant company has not called witnesses for the defense as yet. Atty. W. E. Atwell of Stevens Point appears in behalf of the Rocheleaus, and Goggins, Brazeau & Goggins for the defendant.

Parent-Teachers To Meet At Stevens Point Tuesday

A conference of Parent-Teachers association of the Eighth congressional district will be held at the Presbyterian church at Stevens Point Tuesday, October 31, at which time plans for the formation of a district council of the associations will be formulated.

The conference will open with a luncheon at 12:30, after which there will be a program featured by an address by Mrs. George M. Tremper of Kenosha, state president of the association. Mrs. Minnie Bibbe of Stevens Point will open the program with a vocal solo, after which Miss Van Camp of Stevens Point will give an address of welcome, to which Mrs. G. M. Michigan Lion Tracked To Lair By Reporter Proves Only a Dog

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Oct. 24—The Michigan "lion" which has aroused the dune country in southeast Michigan since last Thursday has been tracked to his lair and is a dog, according to a reporter of the Chicago Daily News, it was said today.

The News reporter, after several days of fruitless search for a new trail of the lion, came upon foot prints resembling those found near Lakeside and followed them.

At length the sleuth, after inquiries at many farm houses, found Adolph Whitemeyer, living in a hut near the edge of the woods of Berrien county where many folks last saw the animal. Mr. Whitemeyer admitted that he had a dog unusually large. The dog is of great size with long thick hair, especially thick on the neck, and the end of its tail is tufted with white hair on the end.

It appeared to be ferocious at first but the reporter observed a wagging tail and soon was on terms with the animal even tickling its ears while taking a print of its feet.

Its feet were found to correspond with the prints found near Lakeside.

Famous Dallas Jurist Condemns Teacher - Critics

Robert E. Lee Saner, prominent Dallas, Texas, lawyer and member of the American Bar Ass'n. addressed the gathering at the Hotel Witter following the campaign address of Mrs. Jessie Jack Hooper. Mr. Saner, who came within three votes of being chosen president of the American Bar Ass'n is regarded as one of the leading American jurists on constitutional law and stands high in his profession throughout the nation. He spoke on the constitution and declared that he did not object to people exercising their rights of free speech by wishing to alter the American Constitution if they could muster enough sentiment and crystalize enough sentiment to make the change. He denounced the state universities and colleges, however for keeping teachers on their pay rolls who injected into the minds of students idle speculation as to whether the constitution is right and just.

Government by Law

"This is a government of laws, not a government of people," Mr. Saner said, "and laws must be respected in order to have government. People will change laws if they do not like them but there should never be a dangerous practice of disobeying laws as a means of changing them." He attacked members of Congress and Senator La Follette especially for attempting to do away with the powers of the courts especially the Supreme Court.

Justice to Many

He said that the greatest justice to all men comes through courts and he said that one thing the American Constitution provided the citizens of this country were tribunals of justice. "Few people know how many thousands of cases are brought before courts of justice every year and men's rights granted them under the constitution are safeguarded in that manner."

Mr. Saner also stated that constitutional measures were not alone the subject of idle speculation but many university teachers were questioning the present marriage laws and conventions and the religious beliefs of centuries.

The highest temperature recorded here yesterday was 50 degrs. A year ago on the same date it was 60 degrees. The sun rose at 6:21 a. m. and will set at 5:07 p. m.

Fair weather for this season will prevail in this district, westward to the Rockies for the next 48 hours, but considerable cloudiness. The temperature is above normal in the eastern half of the country but cool weather prevails over the Rocky Mountain region.

Indications are generally fair today and tomorrow; somewhat cooler tomorrow.

GLASGOW WILL BE SCENE OF FIRST POLITICAL CLASH

LLOYD GEORGE AND LAW BOTH PLAN SPEECHES AT SCOTTISH METROPOLIS; EXPECT CABINET ANNOUNCEMENT

(By Associated Press)

London, Oct. 24—Glasgow will be the chief center of interest in the political situation for the rest of the week. The new Premier Andrew Bonar Law on Thursday will announce details of his policy, there and forty-eight hours later former Premier Lloyd George will address a meeting, being accompanied by Sir Robert Horne, who is chancellor of the exchequer.

The Times' political correspondent, emphasizes the importance of the situation at Glasgow, which he says is due to the strength of the communist party among industrial workers, adding that this is largely on account of the reluctance of Glasgow members of Parliament to abandon the coalition.

Expect Cabinet Personel

Premier Bonar Law is believed to have submitted his cabinet to the king and the announcement of its composition is expected late today or tomorrow. The new prime minister is said to have advised the king to dissolve parliament, and the privy council is expected to be called for this purpose within a day or two.

Rumor Election Trick

Some reports say Mr. Bonar Law is planning to hold the election on Nov. 15, instead of Nov. 18, in the hope of cutting down the votes of the Labor party and the Liberals. Nov. 18 falls on Saturday, which is the best day for all classes to go to the polls, as election days are not holidays in this country, and the holding of the election in the middle of the week would deprive many thousands of working and business men of a chance to vote. It is possible that this trick may cause a wave of sentiment against the Tories.

Rapids Delegates Return From Legion Convention

The state of Wisconsin was well represented at the national convention of the American Legion at New Orleans, and carried off its share of honors, according to the report of the Wisconsin Rapids delegates who returned yesterday. Dr. F. X. Pomainville, Fred Schnabel, Reginald MacKinnon of this city, and Jerome Farrar of Port Edwards attended the convention. Ed. LaVigne, formerly of Wisconsin Rapids and now connected with the U. S. Shipping Board was also present.

Special trains from thirty states carried about 100,000 legion men from all parts of the country to the convention. Wisconsin had a representation of about 400 including the Beaver Dam legion band, which placed third among the bands at the convention, and Racine Drum Corps, which took first place.

Features of the convention were the address by Samuel Gompers in which he asserted that the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor were both pledged to the common cause of true Americanism and an attack by Judge K. M. Landis on the action of the city of New Orleans in obtaining a special injunction forbidding the sale of liquor while the convention was in progress. He termed this action an insult to the American Legion.

WHAT THE HENS DID

It took the good old American hen to put a crimp in the Chicago and mid-western food hoarders. About the most useless and good-for-nothing citizen that the United States possesses (unfortunately) is the food hoarder. There is one other member of the human family which resembles in principle the hog more than the man who gets a corner on the essential food of a nation and then proceeds to hang onto it until the price has soared and he gets his margin.

The nicest little news that comes is that the activity of the hens has put the egg hoarders to rout and has left them high and dry holding thousands of dozens of eggs with the market declining. We wish to congratulate the hens with all our might and wish them a prosperous and busy laying season for some weeks to come.

PEAKING OF PRODUCES

Good business knows what it is doing. The practice of flooding the market with goods has ceased in many lines of manufacture. The manufacturer has realized that he can not maintain a good wage for his employees, keep them occupied all the time and at the same time make a profit in his business if he floods the market beyond the saturation point of the public. If supply exceeds demand, the business man usually feeds the market instead of trying to bowl it over with an excess of product.

What does the farmer do. He has not yet realized fully that he is in business. He has a bumper crop, his neighbor has a bumper crop and the whole farming area has a bumper crop. They proceed to dump the crops on the market in a hurry to get their money out with a result there is no market, farm produce becomes a drug on the market and the farmer loses. The inevitable law of supply and demand gets the farmer in a corner and he is ruined. The farmers who are wise are those who listen to reason, join worthwhile co-operative marketing and breeding associations and proceed to feed the market in an orderly manner, getting a just and fair price for the crops. No one will deny the farmers this right to good business judgement. Our aim is to encourage them by stimulating their interest every time possible to a real interest in good associations and in good co-operative methods. The farmer should be discouraged from fastening onto political schemes which are offered in the form of co-operative projects and his eyes should be opened. Furthermore he should be on guard himself.

The first move is up to the farmer and the business man moves next. The best thing Wisconsin Rapids merchants could do would be to wake to their opportunity and help the farmers get organized for better marketing and better selling. Not alone is this city and her merchants to blame but it is true everywhere. People must co-operate and business must co-operate. Merchants and farmers are alike, both are business men. Get together.

THE WAR DEBTS

"The Money Power" foregathered in New York City, the other day. Strange to say, no meetings were held in Wall Street. Equally strange to say, nothing was mentioned about grinding down the people. It would be a good thing for the country if instead of punishing its radicals, it would enforce their attendance upon such meetings of the American Bankers Association.

The modern banker by the very necessities of his occupation must have a broad outlook and a liberal attitude. We are watching the evolution of a new type of public man; the banker, whose influence is not due to his control of the purse strings, but to his large minded knowledge of public affairs. Fifty years ago, the banker could be of the "David Harum" type. To-day when the economic web binds all nations together, he must have an intelligent knowledge of world affairs.

When such men gathered together in the American Bankers Association speak on international matters, it is well for the rest of us to take heed to their words. And, there was one note struck again and again at this recent convention, cancellation of war debts. Not complete cancellation, but a radical scaling down, that will make it possible for the debtor nations to move along the road of economic recovery.

No one who knows anything about European affairs, believes that Germany can pay the enormous indemnity assessed against her. The reparations, she can handle, but beyond that she can not go. But France is absolutely unwilling to write down the indemnity in the slightest degree, for she counts on the indemnity to pay her own debts to England and the United States. The United States demands the payment of the debts owed her, in order that she can refund Liberty Bond issues, or pay a bonus. It is a vicious circle, and only radical action will cut a way out of it.

The international bankers, for the American Bankers Association had of the great European countries to be present, saw where they could make untold profits by various funding schemes. But they saw also, as none could see better, that these debts, althe funded a score of times, can never be paid. As practical business men, they call for an immediate writing down of these debts, and immediate placing of world finance upon a stable basis.

The technical side of the question is too involved for consideration here. If you are interested you can read the article in October number of the "Yale Review". But for the average man, this much should be said: drop your prejudices, and follow the leadership of men who know.

A FINE SPORTSMAN

Lord Desborough, who has given evidence of his fine sportsmanship in a novel and practical manner by insuring his life for $50,000 in favor of the London institution which cares for the blinded war veterans, is known in England as the "Prince of Athletes," a title earned by long and active association with all branches of sport. From the time that he was at Harrow, and played with the eleven in 1873, to the present day, athletics have attracted him. At Oxford he represented the university in the three-mile race and rowed in the varsity eight. After leaving the university he indulged in the pastime of Alpine climbing, he visited the Himalayas. He swam across Niagara on two occasions, and completed a variety of achievements by carrying off the punting championship for three years. In 1908 he served as president of the Olympic Games Committee. In parliament Lord Desborough has represented three constituencies as a Conservative.

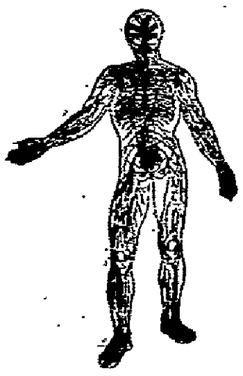
Nerves and Health

THE net work of nerves which carries the normal flow of life-giving energy to every organ and tissue is responsible for the health of the body. These nerves are distributed through the spinal column.



If through accidents, blows, strains or unnatural curvature the moveable bones of the spine become slightly displaced, they press on the nerves and obstruct the free passage of the health-giving currents. The organs or tissues fed by the obstrucfed nerves naturally become weakened and diseased. Pressure on the nerves leading to the stomach, for instance, is often the cause of stomach trouble.

by a method of scientific adjustment corrects these spinal defects, relieves the pressure on the nerves and removes the cause of disease. With normal conditions restored, the life-giving currents have full power to repair and strengthen, and health results in a natural way, without the use of drugs or surgery. No matter what the ailment, experience proves that it can be relieved through Chiropractic (KI-RO-PRAK-TIC) adjustments of certain parts of the spine.

The sick should not be discouraged, even though they have sought relief for years and tried every known method of health.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

"I could eat a little before supper time," she admitted. "I forgot to take my lunch with me this morning. It is still there in the pantry on the bread box, wrapped up in brown paper, just as I left it—"

She half rose in bed, supported on one arm, her curly brown-gold hair framing her face:

"—Two cakes of sugar-milk chocolate in a flat brown packet tied with a string," she explained, smiling at his amusement.

So he went down to the pantry and discovered the parcel on the bread box where she had left it that morning before starting for the cache on Owl Marsh.

He brought it to her, placed both pillows upright behind her, stepped back gaily to admire the effect. Eve, with her parcel in her hands, laughed shyly at his comedy.

"Begin on your chocolate," he said. "I'm going back to fix you some bread and butter and a cup of tea."

When again he had disappeared the girl, still smiling, began to untie her packet, hurriedly, slowly, loosening string and wrapping.

Her attention was not fixed on what her slender fingers were about.

She drew from the parcel a flat morocco case with a scent of arms and crest stamped on it in gold, black, and scarlet.

For a few moments she stared at the object stupidly. The next moment she heard Stormont's spurred tread on the stairs; and she thrust the morocco case and the wrapping under the pillows behind her.

She looked up at him in a dazed way when he came in with the tea and bread. He sat the tin tray on her bureau and came over to the bedside.

"Eve," he said, "you look very white and ill. Have you been hurt somewhere, and haven't you admitted it?"

She seemed unable to speak and he took both her hands and looked anxiously into the lovely, pallid features.

After a moment she turned her head and buried her face in the pillow, trembling now in overwhelming realization of what she had endured for the sake of two cakes of sugar-milk chocolate hidden under a bush in the forest.

For a long while the girl lay there, the feverish flush of tears on her partly hidden face, her nervous hands tremulous, restless, now seeking his, convulsively, now striving to escape his clasp—eloquent, uncertain little hands that seemed to tell so much and yet were telling him nothing he could understand.

"Eve, dear," he said, "are you in pain? What is it that has happened to you? I thought you were all right. You seemed all right—"

"I am," she said in a smothered voice. "You'll stay here with me, won't you?"

"Of course I will. It's just the reaction. It's all over. You're relaxing. That's all dear. You're safe. Nothing can harm you now—"

"Please don't leave me."

After a moment: "I won't leave you . . . I wish I might never leave you."

In the tense silence that followed her trembling ceased. Then his heart, heavy, irregular, began beating so that the startled pulses in her body awoke wildly responsive.

Deep emotions, new, unfamiliar, were stirring, awakening confusing them both. In a sudden instinct to escape she turned and partly rose on one elbow, gazing blindly about her out of tear-marred eyes.

"I want my room to myself," she murmered in a breathless sort of way, "—I want you to go out, please—"

A boyish flush burnt his face. He got up slowly took his rifle from the corner, went out, closing the door, and seated himself on the stairs.

And there, on guard, sat Trooper Stormont, rigid, unstirring, hour after hour, facing the first great passion of his life, and stunned by the impact of its swift and unexpected blow.

In her chamber, on the bed's edge, sat Eve Strayer, her deep eyes fixed on space. Vague emotions exquisitely recurrent, new born, possessed her.

The whole world, too, all around her seemed to have become misty and golden and all pulsating with a faint, still rhythm that indefinably thrilled her pulses to response.

Passion, full-armed, springs flaming from the heart of man. Woman is slow to burn. And it was the delicate phantom of passion that Eve gazed upon,there in her unpainted chamber, her sun-stained fingers linked listlessly in her lap her little feet like bruised white flowers drooping above the floor.

Hour after hour she sat there dreaming, starring at the tinted ghost of Eros, rose-hued, near-smiling, unreal, impalpable as the dusty sunbeam that slanted from her window, gilding the boarded floor.

Three spectres, gliding near paused to gaze at State Trooper Stormont, on guard by the stairs. Then they looked at the closed door of Eve's chamber.

Then the three spectres, Fate, Chance and Destiny whispering together, passed on toward the depths of the sunset forest.

EPISODE FIVE
Drowned Valley
CHAPTER I

The soft, bluish forest shadows had lengthened, and the barred sun-rays, filtering through, were tinged with a rosy hue before Jake Kloon, the hootch runner, and Earl Leverett, trap thief, came to Drowned Valley.

They were still a mile distant from the most southern edge of that vast desolation, but already tamaracks appeared in the beauty of their burnt gold; little pools glimmered here and there; patches of amber sphagnum and crimson pitcher-plants became frequent; and once or twice Kloon's big boots broke through the crust of fallen leaves, soaking him to the ankles with black silt.

Leverett, always a coward, had pursued his devious and larcenous way through the world, always in deadly fear of sink holes.

His movements and paths were those of a weasel, preferring always solid ground; but he lacked the courage of that sinuous little beast, though he possessed all of its ferocity and far more cunning.

He looked at the back of Kloon's massive head. One shot would blow that skull into fragments, he thought, shivering.

One shot from behind—and twenty thousand dollars—or, if it proved a better deal, the contents of the packet. For if Quintana's bribery had dazzled them, what effect might the contents of that secret packet have if revealed?

There might easily be half a million in bills pressed together in that heavy, flat packet. Bills were absolutely safe plunder. But Kloon had turned a deaf ear to his suggestions—Kloon, who never entertained ambitions beyond his hootch rake-off— whose miserable imagination stopped at a wretched parentage, satisfied.

Tomaracks, sphagnum, crimson pitcher-plants grew thicker, wet woods set with little black pools stretched away on every side.

It was still nearly a mile from Drowned Valley when Jake Kloon halted in his tracks and seated himself on a narrow ridge of hard ground. And Leverett came lightly up and, after nosing the whole vicinity, sat down cautiously where Kloon would have to turn partly around to look at him.

"Where the hell do we meet up with Quintana?" growled Kloon, tearing a and shoving the remainder into his trousers pocket.

"We gotta travel a piece, yet. . . . mouthful from a gnawed tobacco plug Say, Jake, be you a man or be you a poor dumb critter what ain't got no spunk?"

Kloon, chewing on his cud, turned and glanced at him. Then he spat, as answer.

"If you got the spunk of a chipmunk you and me'll take a peek at that there packet. I bet you it's thousand-dollar bills—more'n a billion million dollars, likely."

Kloon's dogged silence continued. Leverett licked his dry lips. His rifle lay on his knees. Almost imperceptibly he moved it, moved it again, froze stiff as Kloon spat, then, by infinitesimal degrees, continues to edge the muzle toward Kloon.

"Jake?"

"Aw, shut your head," grumbled Kloon disdainfully. "You allus was a dirty rate—you sneakin' trap robber. Enough's enough. I ain't got no use for no billion million dollar bills. Ten thousand'll buy me all I cal'late to need till I'm planted. But you're like a hawg; you ain't never had enough o' nothin' and you won't never git enough neither—not if you wuz God a'mighty you wouldn't."

"Ten thousand dollars hain't nothin' to a billion million, Jake."

Kloon squirted a stream of tobacco at a pitcher-plant and filled the cup. Diverted and gratified by the accuracy of his aim, he took other shots at intervals.

Leverett moved the muzzle of his rifle a hair's width to the left, shivered, moved it again. Under his soggy, sun-tanned skin a pallor made his visage sickly gray.

"Jake?"

No answer.

"Say, Jake?"

No notice.

Jake, I wanta take a peek at them bills."

Merely another stream of tobacco soiling the crimson pitcher.

"I'm—I'm desprit. I gotta take a peek. I gotta—gotta—"

Something in Leverett's unsteady voice made Kloon turn his head.

"You gol rammed fool," he said, "what you doin' with your—"

The loud detonation of the rifle punctuated Kloon's inquiry with a final period. The big, soft-nosed bullet struck him full in the face, spilling his brains and part of his skull down his back, and knocking him flat as thought he had been clubbed.

Leverett, stunned, sat staring, motionless, clutchin gthe rifle from the muzzle of which a delicate stain of vapor floated and disappeared through a risy bar of sunshine.

In the intense stillness of the place, suddenly the dead man made a sound; and the trap-robber nearly fainted.

But it was only air escaping from the slowly collapsing lungs; and Leverett, ashy pale, shaking, got to his feet and leaned heavily against an oak tree, his eyes never stirring from the sprawling thing on the ground.

If it were a minute or a year he stood there he could never have reckoned the space of time. The sun's level rays glimmered ruddy through the woods. A green fly appeared, buzzing about the dead man. Another zig-zagged through the sunshine, facing it with streaks of greenish fire. Others appeared, whirling, gyrating, filling the silence with their humming. And still Leverett dared not budge, dared not search the dead and take from it that for which the dead had died.

A little breeze came by and stirred the bushy hair on Kloon's head and fluttered the ferns around him where he lay.

Then, near in the ferns, the withering fronds twitched, and a red squirrel sprung his startling alarm, squeaking, squealing, chattering his opinion of murder; and Leverett, shaking with the shock, wiped icy sweat from his face, laid aside his rifle, and took his first stiff step toward the dead man.

But as he bent over he changed his mind, turned, reeling a little, then crept slowly out among the pitcher-plants, searching about him as though sniffing.

In a few minute she discovered what he was looking for; took his bearings; carefully picked his way back over a leafy crust that trembled under his cautious tread.

He bent over Kloon and, from the left inside coat pocket, he drew the packet and placed it inside his own flannel shirt.

Then, turning his back to the dead, he squatted down and clutched Kloon's burly ankles, as a man grasps the handles of a wheelbarrow to draw it after him.

Dragging, rolling, bumping over roots, Jake Kloon took his last trail through the wilderness, leaving a redder path than was left by the setting sun through fern and moss and wastes of pitcher-plants.

Always, as Leverett crept on, pulling the dead behind him, the floor of the woods trembled slightly, and a black ooze wet the crust of withered leaves.

At the quaking edge of a little pool of water, Leverett halted. The water was dark but scarcely an inch deep over its black bed of silt.

Beside this sink hole the trap-thief dropped Kloon. Then he drew his hunting knife and cut a tall, slim swamp maple. The sapling was about twenty feet in height. Leverett thrust the butt of it into the pool. Without any effort he pushed the entire sapling out of sight in the depthless silt.

He had to maneuver very gingerly to dump Kloon into the pool and keep out of it himself. Finally he managed it.

To his alarm, Kloon did not sink far. He cut another sapling and pushed the body until only the shoes were visible above the silt.

These, however, were very slowly sinking, now. Bubbles rose, dully iridescent, floated, broke. Strings of blood hung suspended in the clouding water.

Leverett went back to the little ridge and covered with dead leaves the spot where Kloon had lain. There were broken ferns, but he could not straighten them. And there lay Kloon's rifle.

For a while he hesitated, his habits of economy being ingrained; but he remembered the packet in his shirt, and he carried the rifle to the little pool and shoved it, muzzle first, driving it downward, out of sight.

As he rose from the pool's edge, somebody laid a hand on his shoulder.

That was the most real death that Leverett ever had died.

Job For Your Tractor In Winter Pays You Dividends

Grinding feed, sawing wood, hauling manure, and shelling corn, are the jobs suggested by F. W. Duffee of the agricultural department, University of Wisconsin, for the tractor after the usual summer and early fall field work is completed.

If an all winter's job is wanted for the tractor, it can be used to run a feed grinding machine-this, of course, would be of no value to the farmer who is not feeding quite a large herd.

"We do not urge the farmer to use his tractor during the severe cold weather, due to the trouble which will be experienced in starting, and the difficulty of keeping the tractor properly lubricated," say Mr. Duffee.

WHAT THE HENS DID

It took the good old American hen to put a crimp in the Chicago and mid-western food hoarders. About the most useless and good-for-nothing citizen that the United States possesses (unfortunately) is the food hoarder. There is one other member of the human family which resembles in principle the hog more than the man who gets a corner on the essential food of a nation and then proceeds to hang onto it until the price has soared and he gets his margin.

The nicest part of the news that comes is that the activity of the hens has put the egg hoarders to rout and has left them high and dry holding thousands of dozens of eggs with the market declining. We wish to congratulate the hens with all our might and wish them a prosperous and busy laying season for some weeks to come.

PEAKING OF PRODUCES

Good business knows what it is doing. The practice of flooding the market with goods has ceased in many lines of manufacture. The manufacturer has realized that he can not maintain a good wage for his employees, keep them occupied all the time and at the same time make a profit in his business if he floods the market beyond the saturation point of the public. If supply exceeds demand, the business man usually feeds the market instead of trying to bowl it over with an excess of products.

What does the farmer do. He has not yet realized fully that he is in business. He has a bumper crop, his neighbor has a bumper crop and the whole farming area has a bumper crop. They proceed to dump the crops on the market in a hurry to get their money out with a result there is no market, farm produce becomes a drug on the market and the farmer loses. The inevitable law of supply and demand gets the farmer in a corner and he is ruined. The farmers who are wise are those who listen to reason, join worthwhile co-operative marketing and breeding associations and proceed to feed the market in an orderly manner, getting a just and fair price for the crops. No one will deny the farmers this right to good business judgement. Our aim is to encourage them by stimulating their interest every time possible to a real interest in good associations and in good co-operative methods. The farmer should be discouraged from fastening onto political schemes which are offered in the form of co-operative projects and his eyes should be opened. Furthermore he should be on guard himself.

The first move is up to the farmer and the business man moves next. The best thing Wisconsin Rapids merchants could do would be to wake to their opportunity and help the farmers get organized for better marketing and better selling. Not alone is this city and her merchants to blame but it is true everywhere. People must co-operate and business must co-operate. Merchants and farmers are alike, both are business man. Get together.

"THE WAR DEBTS."

"The Money Power" foregathered in New York City, the other day. Strange to say, no meetings were held in Wall Street. Equally strange to say, nothing was mentioned about grinding down the people. It would be a good thing for the country if instead of punishing its radicals, it would enforce their attendance upon such meetings of the American Bankers Association.

The modern banker by the very necessities of his occupation must have a broad outlook and a liberal attitude. We are watching the evolution of a new type of public man; the banker, whose influence is not due to his control of the purse strings, but to his large minded knowledge of public affairs. Fifty years ago, the banker could be of the "David Harlin" type. To-day when the economic web binds all nations together, he must have an intelligent knowledge of world affairs.

When such men gathered together in the American Bankers Association speak on international matters, it is well for the rest of us to take heed to their words. And, there was one note struck again and again at this recent convention, cancellation of war debts. Not complete cancellation, but a radical scaling down, that will make it possible for the debtor nations to move along the road of economic recovery.

No one who knows anything about European affairs, believes that Germany can pay the enormous indemnity assessed against her. The reparations, she can handle, but beyond that she can not go. But France is absolutely unwilling to write down the indemnity in the slightest degree, for she counts on the indemnity to pay her own debts to England and the United States. The United States demands the payment of the debts owed her, in order that she can refund Liberty Bond issues, or pay a bonus. It is a vicious circle, and only radical action will cut a way out of it.

The international bankers, for the American Bankers Association had of the great European countries to be present, saw where they could make untold profits by various funding schemes. But they saw also, as none could see better, that these debts, althe funded a score of times, can never be paid. As practical business men, they call for an immediate writing down of these debts, and immediate placing of world finance upon a stable basis.

The technical side of the question is too involved for consideration here. If you are interested you can read the article in October number of the "Yale Review". But for the average man, this much should be said; drop your prejudices, and follow the leadership of men who know.

A FINE SPORTSMAN

Lord Desborough, who has given evidence of his fine sportsmanship in a novel and practical manner by insuring his life for $50,000 in favor of the London institution which cares for the blinded war veterans, is known in England as the "Prince of Athletes," a title earned by long and active association with all branches of sport. From the time that he was at Harrow, and played with the eleven in 1873, to the present day, athletics have attracted him. At Oxford he represented the university in the three mile race and rowed in the varsity eight. After leaving the university he indulged in the pastime of Alpine climbing, he visited the Himalayas. He swam across Niagara on two occasions, and completed a variety of achievements by carrying off the punting championship for three years. In 1908 he served as president of the Olympic Games Committee. In parliament Lord Desborough has represented three constituencies as a Conservative.

Health Depends on Foot Comfort

Only within recent years has the average man or woman realized to what a great extent physical health depends on correct shoes.

This is especially true of women, whose feet are subjected to shoes which cramp the muscles and crowd the bones.

The Menihan Arch-Aid Shoe, with its supporting shank, helps to carry the body's burden when weary foot muscles rebel.

And shoes of mighty pleasing style

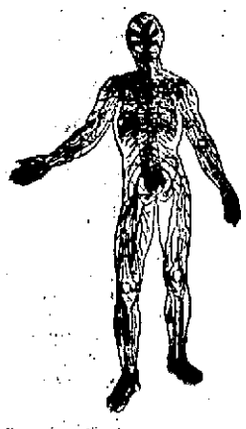
Nerves and Health

THE net work of nerves which carries the normal flow of life-giving energy to every organ and tissue is responsible for the health of the body. These nerves are distributed through the spinal column.

If through accidents, blows, strains or unnatural curvature the moveable bones of the spine become slightly displaced, they press on the nerves and obstruct the free passage of the health-giving currents. The organs or tissues fed by the obstructed nerves naturally become weakened and diseased. Pressure on the nerves leading to the stomach, for instance, is often the cause of stomach trouble.



CHIROPRACTIC

by a method of scientific adjustment corrects these spinal defects, relieves the pressure on the nerves and removes the cause of disease. With normal conditions restored, the life-giving currents have full power to repair and strengthen, and health results in a natural way, without the use of drugs or surgery. No matter what the ailment, experience proves that it can be relieved through Chiropractic (KI-RO-PRAK-TIC) adjustments of certain parts of the spine.

The sick should not be discouraged, even though they have sought relief for years and tried every known method of health.

CHIROPRACTIC
THE BETTER WAY TO HEALTH

has done wonders in bringing relief in long standing and obstinate cases. Investigate and learn what Chiropractic has done and is doing for others, and what it can do for you.

COON—LEWIS

Miss Pearl Coon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Coon of Nekoosa and Glen Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lewis of Port Edwards were married at two o'clock this afternoon at the Nekosa Congregational Church, Rev. C. A. O'Neil officiating. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Woolcock of Port Edwards.

The bride wore a brown velour suit with a picture hat to match and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and carnation.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the brides parents to immediate relatives. The home was very prettily decorated with ferns, flowers and autumn leaves.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are well known in this vicinity, having lived here most of their lives. The young couple will leave immediately for northern Texas where they will make their home. The groom holds a responsible position in that state.

Read This If You Boil Your Clothes

By HARRIET MADISON

I presume every woman would like to get rid of the steamy, messy work of boiling her clothes, and as I have been fortunate in doing so, I am quite glad to tell about my simple method.

After all, the reason you boil your clothes is to get out the "gray dirt" that the ordinary laundry soap does not wash out.

Please don't think that I am recommending the use of "washing powders" or mysterious solutions, because I won't risk my materials to any chemical strong enough to bleach them. My way is simply an application of method used by fabric manufacturers who wash their materials with olive oil soap.

Probably the only home laundry bar that contains olive oil is GREEN ARROW soap made by The Palmolive Co., whose splendid Palmolive toilet soap is known to every woman. I simply soak my clothes for 20 or 30 minutes in GREEN ARROW suds before washing them. That does away not only with boiling, but also with hard, destructive rubbing. The naptha and olive oil in GREEN ARROW take out grease that ordinary laundry soap has little effect on.

Recently I was telling this to my grocer. "Yes," he said, "many of my customers now wash with GREEN ARROW, and I guess the wash boiler will soon be as much of a curiosity as the spinning wheel.

"GREEN ARROW Laundry Soap makes clothes wear much longer, because it contains only soap—no 'filler.' There is 33⅓% to 100% more soap in the GREEN ARROW bar, although it is not much larger, if any. But anyone who will stop to think can see that GREEN ARROW at a cent or two more costs less per week than other soaps, because it is all cleaning power and goes nearly twice as far."

"I know that is true from my own experience," I told him, "and I know that my clothes have never looked whiter and felt softer even when new. Besides this, I want you to look at my hands. GREEN ARROW does not redden or roughen them in the least when I wash."

THEATRES

"THE STORM"

The beauty of the drama is sometimes so clogged with sentiment that it becomes obscured in a salty wash of tears, but this is not true of "The Storm," the Universal-Jewel production which opens an engagement of three days at the Palace Theatre tonight. It is a powerful story of love and hate, of simple honesty and crafty cunning, of quiet mountain nooks and raging snow storms, of peace and quiet and of mountain forests turned into an inferno.

Adapted from Langdon McCormick's great stage success, which was produced by George Broadhurst, for a record run in New York and other metropolitan cities, the screen version of "The Storm" stands forth as one of the greatest productions of a decade. House Peters plays the leading role, that of a simple woodsman, who trusts all men and fears only—women

A raging forest fire that sweeps in devasting waves through the mountains furnishes the grand climax, a climax seldom equalled and never excelled. Another gripping scene is the snow storm that swirls and eddies around the tiny mountain cabin and makes the girl a prisoner in the house of the woman hater. Throughout the suspense has been well maintained by Director Reginald Barker.

Miss Vaili and Mr. Moore are excellent in their roles, and great credit also must be given to Josef Swickard, Frank Lanning and Gordon McGee.

At Palace Thursday and Friday

"Sisters" is one of the best pictures on the marriage theme that has been available to exhibitors for some time. It realizes the distinction of being popular without, in any sense, being common. Its universal appeal to women goes almost without saying and it is almost as safe to predict that men will find certain entertainment here.

REVIEWED BY MARY KELLY

Kathleen Norris's widely-read novel, which ran first as a magazine serial, is the foundation for the picture, and the success in keeping to the motive and spirit of the story is one of the admirable features. Dealing as it does with the matter-of-face side of married life after the illusions are gone, it fares the difficulty of making this prosaic slant on existence interesting, without resorting to sensationalism restrained, it presents the inevitable sufferings of two uncongenial marriages in a way that commands absorbed attention. The quietness of the action throughout is one of the greatest charms. Even the most dramatic moments illustrate this, and just because they are subdued, they have increased power.

Seena Owen in this role of the wife, face-to-face with the knowledge that her husband is in love with another woman gives a poignantly repressed preformance. She is the embodiment of the spirit of the entire picture. Gladys Leslie as the sister, M. Moore as the husband and—Joe King as the sister's husband are fine types who respond unerringly to splendid directing. The photography and settings show unusual skill.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" IS AS FRAGRANT AS ROSES

Two eyes "Smilin Through" a green lattice!

The black wing of tragedy brushing by a quaint rose garden.

Here is the contrast of light and shade that gives poignancy to romance.

The eyes danced. So did the smiling little feet of Moonyeen.

And Moonyeen, whenver she comes before the camera, wears a sort of golden haze (cast upon her by moonlight and mist—and a clever director) that should surround every woman in love.

Even the little figure of herself that she whimsically sends her lover catches some of this glamour.

Fragrant as roses is 'Smilin' Through'—and from the play that simply was born to become a great picture.

And the mist is not all in the eye of the camera, as those who see Norma Talmadge in her latest and best First National starring vehicle t the Ideal Theatre for three days beginning today, will agree.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

"I could eat a little before supper time," she admitted. "I forgot to take my lunch with me this morning. It is still there in the pantry on the bread box, wrapped up in brown paper, just as I left it—"

She half rose in bed, supported on one arm, her curly brown-gold hair framing her face:

"—Two cakes of sugar-milk chocolate in a flat brown packet tied with a string," she explained, smiling at his amusement.

So he went down to the pantry and discovered the parcel on the bread box where she had left it that morning before starting for the cache on Owl Marsh.

He brought it to her, placed both pillows upright behind her, stepped back gaily to admire the effect. Eve, with her parcel in her hands, laughed shyly at his comedy.

"Begin on your chocolate," he said. "I'm going back to fix you some bread and butter and a cup of tea."

When again he had disappeared the girl, still smiling, began to untie her packet, hurriedly, slowly, loosening string and wrapping.

Her attention was not fixed on what her slender fingers were about.

She drew from the parcel a flat morocco case with a coat of arms and crest stamped on it in gold, black, and scarlet.

For a few moments she stared at the object stupidly. The next moment she heard Stormont's spurred tread on the stairs; and she thrust the morocco case and the wrapping under the pillows behind her.

She looked up at him in a dazed way when he came in with the tea and bread. He sat the tin tray on her bureau and came over to the bedside.

"Eve," he said, "you look very white and ill. Have you been hurt somewhere, and haven't you admitted it?"

She seemed unable to speak and he took both her hands and looked anxiously into the lovely, pallid features.

After a moment she turned her head and buried her face in the pillow, trembling now in overwhelming realization of what she had endured for the sake of two cakes of sugar-milk chocolate hidden under a bush in the forest.

For a long while the girl lay there, the feverish flush of tears on her partly hidden face, her nervous hands tremulous, restless, now seeking his, convulsively, now striving to escape his clasp—eloquent, uncertain little hands that seemed to tell so much and yet were telling him nothing he could understand.

"Eve, dear," he said, "are you in pain? What is it that has happened to you? I thought you were all right. You seemed all right—"

"I am," she said in a smothered voice. "You'll stay here with me, won't you?"

"Of course I will. It's just the reaction. It's all over. You're relaxing. That's all dear. You're safe. Nothing can harm you now—"

"Please don't leave me."

After a moment: "I won't leave you.....I wish I might never leave you."

In the tense silence that followed her trembling ceased. Then his heart, heavy, irregular, began beating so that the startled pulses in her body awoke wildly responsive.

Deep emotions, new, unfamiliar, were stirring, awakening confusing them both. In a sudden instinct to escape she turned and partly rose on one elbow, gazing blindly about her out of tear-marred eyes.

"I want my room to myself," she murmered in a breathless sort of way, "—I want you to go out, please—"

A boyish flush burnt his face. He got up slowly took his rifle from the corner, went out, closing the door, and seated himself on the stairs.

And there, on guard, sat Trooper Stormont, rigid, unstirring, hour after hour, facing the first great passion of His life, and stunned by the impact of its swift and unexpected blow.

In her chamber, on the bed's edge, sat Eve Strayef, her deep eyes fixed on space. Vague emotions exquisitely recurrent, new born, possessed her.

The whole world, too, all around her seemed to have become misty and golden and all pulsating with a faint, still rhythm that indefinably thrilled her pulses to response.

Passion, full-armed, springs flaming from the heart of man. Woman is slow to burn. And it was the delicate phantom of passion that Eve gazed upon,there in her unpainted chamber, her sun-stained fingers linked listlessly in her lap her little feet like bruised white flowers drooping above the floor.

Hour after hour she sat there dreaming, starring at the tinted ghost of Eros, rose-hued, near-smiling, unreal, impalpable as the dusty sunbeam that slanted from her window, gilding the boarded floor.

Three spectres, gliding near paused to gaze at State Trooper Stormont, on guard by the stairs. Then they looked at the closed door of Eve's chamber.

Then the three spectres, Fate, Chance and Destiny whispering together, passed on toward the depths of the sunset forest.

EPISODE FIVE
Drowned Valley
CHAPTER I

The soft, bluish forest shadows had lengthened, and the barred sun-rays, filtering through, were tinged with a rosy hue before Jake Kloon, the hootch runner, and Earl Leverett, trap thief, came to Drowned Valley.

They were still a mile distant from the most southern edge of that vast desolation, but already tamaracks appeared in the beauty of their burnt gold; little pools glimmered here and there; patches of amber sphagnum and crimson pitcher-plants became frequent; and once or twice Kloon's big boots broke through the crust of fallen leaves, soaking him to the ankles with black silt.

Leverett, always a coward, had pursued his devious and lareenous way through the world, always in deadly fear of sink holes.

His movements and paths were those of a weasel, preferring always solid ground; but he lacked the courage of that sinuous little beast, though he possessed all of its ferocity and far more cunning.

He looked at the back of Kloon's massive head. One shot would blow that skull into fragments, he thought, shivering.

One shot from behind—and twenty thousand dollars—or, if it proved a better deal, the contents of the packet. For if Quintana's bribery had dazzled them, what effect might the contents of that secret packet have if revealed?

There might easily be half a million in bills pressed together in that heavy, flat packet. Bills were absolutely safe plunder. But Kloon had turned a deaf ear to his suggestions—Kloon, who never entertained ambitions beyond his hootch rake-off— whose miserable imagination stopped at a wretched parentage, satisfied.

Tomaracks, sphagnum, crimson pitcher-plants grew thicker, wet woods set with little black pools stretched away on every side.

It was still nearly a mile from Drowned Valley when Jake Kloon halted in his tracks and seated himself on a narrow ridge of hard ground. And Leverett came lightly up and, after nosing the whole vicinity, sat down cautiously where Kloon would have to turn partly around to look at him.

"Where the hell do we meet up with Quintana?" growled Kloon, tearing a and shoving the remainder into his trousers pocket.

"We gotta travel a piece, yet. . . . mouthful from a gnawed tobacco plug Say, Jake, he you a man or be you a poor dumb critter what ain't got no spunk?"

Kloon, crewing on his cud, turned and glanced at him. Then he spat, as answer.

"If you got the spunk of a chipmunk you and me'll take a peek at that there packet. I bet you it's thousand-dollar bills—more'n a billion million dollars, likely."

Kloon's dogged silence continued. Leverett licked his dry lips. His rifle lay on his knees. Almost imperceptibly he moved it, moved it again, froze stiff as Kloon spat, then, by infinitesimal degrees, continues to edge the muzle toward Kloon.

"Jake?"

"Aw, shut your head," grombled Kloon disdainfully. "You allus was a dirty rate—you sneakin' trap robber. Enough's enough. I ain't got no use for no billion million dollar bills. Ten thousand'll buy me all I cal'late to need till I'm planted. But you're like a hawg; you ain't never had enough o' nothin' and you won't never git enough neither—not if you wuz God a'mighty you wouldn't."

"Ten thousand dollars hain't nothin' to a billion million, Jake."

Kloon squirted a stream of tobacco at a pitcher-plant and filled the cup. Diverted and gratified by the accuracy of his aim, he took other shots at intervals.

Leverett moved the muzzle of his rifle a hair's width to the left, shivered, moved it again. Under his soggy, sun-tanned skin a pallor made his visage sickly gray.

"Jake?"

No answer.

"Say, Jake?"

No notice.

Jake, I wanta take a peek at them bills."

Merely another stream of tobacco soiling the crimson pitcher.

"I'm—I'm desprit. I gotta take a peek. I gotta—gotta—"

Something in Leverett's unsteady voice made Kloon turn his head.

"You gol rammed fool," he said, "what you doin' with your—"

The loud detonation of the rifle punctuated Kloon's inquiry with a final period. The big, soft-nosed bullet struck him full in the face, spilling his brains and part of his skull down his back, and knocking him flat as thought he had been clubbed.

Leverett, stunned, sat staring, motionless, clutchin gthe rifle from the muzzle of which a delicate stain of vapor floated and disappeared through a risy bar of sunshine.

In the intense stillness of the place, suddenly the dead man made a sound; and the trap-robber nearly fainted.

But it was only air escaping from the slowly collapsing lungs; and Leverett, ashy pale, shaking, got to his feet and leaned heavily against an oak tree, his eyes never stirring from the sprawling thing on the ground.

If it were a minute or a year he stood there he could never have reckoned the space of time. The sun's level rays glimmered ruddy through the woods. A green fly appeared, buzzing about the dead man. Another zig-zagged through the sunshine, lacing it with streaks of greenish fire. Others appeared, whirling, gyrating, filling the silence with their humming. And still Leverett dared not budge, dared not search the dead and take from it that for which the dead had died.

A little breeze came by and stirred the bushy hair on Kloon's head and fluttered the ferns around him where he lay.

Then, near in the ferns, the withering fronds twitched, and a red squirrel sprung his startling alarm, squeaking, squealing, chattering his opinion of murder; and Leverett, shaking with the shock, wiped icy sweat from his face, laid aside his rifle, and took his first stiff step toward the dead man.

But as he bent over he changed his mind, turned, reeling a little, then crept slowly out among the pitcher-plants, searching about him as though sniffing.

In a few minute she discovered what he was looking for; took his bearings; carefully picked his way back over a leafy crust that trembled under his cautious tread.

He bent over Kloon and, from the left inside coat pocket, he drew the packet and placed it inside his own flannel shirt.

Then, turning his back to the dead, he squatted down and clutched Kloon's burly ankles, as a man grasps the handles of a wheelbarrow to draw it after him.

Dragging, rolling, bumping over roots, Jake Kloon took his last trail through the wilderness, leaving a redder path than was left by the setting sun through fern and moss and wastes of pitcher-plants.

Always, as Leverett crept on, pulling the dead behind him, the floor of the woods trembled slightly, and a black ooze wet the crust of withered leaves.

At the quaking edge of a little pool of water, Leverett halted. The water was dark but scarcely an inch deep over its black bed of silt.

Beside this sink hole the trap-thief dropped Kloon, Then he drew his hunting knife and cut a tall, slim swamp maple. The sapling was about twenty feet in height. Leverett thrust the butt of it into the pool. Without any effort he pushed the entire sapling out of sight in the depthless silt.

He had to maneuver very gingerly to dump Kloon into the pool and keep out of it himself. Finally he managed it.

To his alarm, Kloon did not sink far. He cut another sapling and pushed the body until only the shoes were visible above the silt.

These, however, were very slowly sinking, now. Bubbles rose, dully iridescent, floated, broke. Strings of blood hung suspended in the clouding water.

Leverett went back to the little ridge and covered with dead leaves the spot where Kloon had lain. There were broken ferns, but he could not straighten them. And there lay Kloon's rifle.

For a while he hesitated, his habits of economy being ingrained; but he remembered the packet in his shirt, and he carried the rifle to the little pool and shoved it, muzzle first, driving it downward, out of sight.

As he rose from the pool's edge, somebody laid a hand on his shoulder.

That was the most real death that Leverett ever had died.

Job For Your Tractor In Winter Pays You Dividends

Grinding feed, sawing wood, hauling manure, and shelling corn, are the jobs suggested by F. W. Duffee of the agricultural department, University of Wisconsin, for the tractor after the usual summer and early fall field work is completed.

If an all winter's job is wanted for the tractor, it can be used to run a feed grinding machine-this, of course, would be of no value to the farmer who is not feeding quite a large herd.

"We do not urge the farmer to use his tractor during the severe cold weather, due to the trouble which will be experienced in starting, and the difficulty of keeping the tractor properly lubricated," say Mr. Duffee.

S. & R. Club Will Give Benefits To Raise Funds

The S. and R. club of Port Edwards will give a movie benefit at the Port Edwards Auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings, November 3 and 4. They have arranged a very fine program, the feature play being "Nanook of the North." There will also be shown a fine comedy, a Pathe News reel and a movie for the children, "A Modern Golden Locks" or "The Three Bears". Proceeds from this entertainment will be used by the S. and R. Club for Welfare work.

Service Is Aim

While "S. and R." stands for Study and Recreation, the club's real aim is to be of service and benefit to the community by doing welfare work among families who are in need. They have shown this by their good work in the community. Every Christmas for the past several years, they have filled baskets with food and toys to be given to needy families in the community. Miss Molly B. Smith, community nurse at Port Edwards, has aided the club a great deal in this line by helping them keep in touch with the needy families.

Aided Wounded Soldiers

The S. and R. Club of Port Edwards was the first club in this community to make a service flag during the late war. They were also the first club to start work for the French wounded during the war, and were also active in Red Cross work and other patriotic activities.

R. A. Peterson Talks Before Nekoosa Chamber On Monday

At the regular Chamber of Commerce meeting at Nekoosa Monday noon, R. A. Peterson gave a talk on "Relations Between the Farmer and Business Man." He stated that the business man should help the farmer to get the best price for his products. He states that this could be done by getting in more buyers so that the competition would be more keen. Another plan was that the farmers form an association and send the products direct.

The committee on cooperative creamery reported that they believed a creamery would be a good proposition for Nekoosa and that the best thing to do now would be to take inventory of the towns in the community.

WEST SARATOGA

This vicinity was well represented at the bridge celebration in Wisconsin Rapids on Wednesday. Everyone reported a most delightful time.

COON—LEWIS

Miss Pearl Coon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Coon of Nekoosa and Glen Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lewis of Port Edwards were married at two o'clock this afternoon at the Nekosa Congregational Church, Rev. C. A. O'Neil officiating. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Woolcock of Port Edwards.

The bride wore a brown velour suit with a picture hat to match and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and carnation.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the brides parents to immediate relatives. The home was very prettily decorated with ferns, flowers and autumn leaves.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are well known in this vicinity, having lived here most of their lives. The young couple will leave immediately for northern Texas where they will make their homo. The groom holds a responsible position in that state.

Read This If You Boil Your Clothes

By HARRIET MADISON

I presume every woman would like to get rid of the steamy, messy work of boiling her clothes, and as I have been fortunate in doing so, I am quite glad to tell about my simple method.

After all, the reason you boil your clothes is to get out the "gray dirt" that the ordinary laundry soap does not wash out.

Please don't think that I am recommending the use of "washing powders" or mysterious solutions, because I won't risk my materials to any chemical strong enough to bleach them. My way is simply an application of method used by fabric manufacturers who wash their materials with olive oil soap.

Probably the only home laundry bar that contains olive oil is GREEN ARROW soap made by The Palmolive Co., whose splendid Palmolive toilet soap is known to every woman. I simply soak my clothes for 20 or 30 minutes in GREEN ARROW suds before washing them. That does away not only with boiling, but also with hard, destructive rubbing. The naptha and olive oil in GREEN ARROW take out grease that ordinary laundry soap has little effect on.

Recently I was telling this to my grocer. "Yes," he said, "many of my customers now wash with GREEN ARROW, and I guess the wash boiler will soon be as much of a curiosity as the spinning-wheel.

"GREEN ARROW Laundry Soap makes clothes wear much longer, because it contains only soap—no 'filler.' There is 33⅓% to 100% more soap in the GREEN ARROW bar, although it is not much larger, if any. But anyone who will stop to think can see that GREEN ARROW at a cent or two more costs less per week than other soaps, because it is all cleaning power and goes nearly twice as far."

"I know that is true from my own experience," I told him, "and I know that my clothes have never looked whiter and felt softer even when new. Besides this, I want you to look at my hands. GREEN ARROW does not redden or roughen them in the least when I wash."

THEATRES

"THE STORM"

The beauty of the drama is sometimes so clogged with sentiment that it becomes obscured in a salty wash of tears, but this is not true of "The Storm," the Universal-Jewel production which opens an engagement of three days at the Palace Theatre tonight. It is a powerful story of love and hate, of simple honesty and crafty cunning, of quiet mountain nooks and raging snow storms, of peace and quiet and of mountain forests turned into an inferno.

Adapted from Langdon McCormick's great stage success, which was produced by George Broadhurst, for a record run in New York and other metropolitan cities, the screen version of "The Storm" stands forth as one of the greatest productions of a decade. House Peters plays the leading role, that of a simple woodsman, who trusts all men and fears only—women

A raging forest fire that sweeps in devasting waves through the mountains furnishes the grand climax, a climax seldom equalled and never excelled. Another gripping scene is the snow storm that swirls and eddies around the tiny mountain cabin and makes the girl a prisoner in the house of the woman hater. Throughout the suspense has been well maintained by Director Reginald Barker.

Miss Vaili and Mr. Moore are excellent in their roles, and great credit also must be given to Josef Swickard, Frank Lanning and Gordon McGee.

At Palace Thursday and Friday

"Sisters" is one of the best pictures on the marriage theme that has been available to exhibitors for some time. It realizes the distinction of being popular without, in any sense, being common. Its universal appeal to women goes almost without saying and it is almost as safe to predict that men will find certain entertainment here.

REVIEWED BY MARY KELLY

Kathleen Norris's widely-read novel, which ran first as a magazine serial, is the foundation for the picture, and the success in keeping to the motive and spirit of the story is one of the admirable features. Dealing as it does with the matter-of-face side of married life after the illusions are gone, it fares the difficulty of making this prosaic slant on existence interesting, without resorting to sensationalism restrained, it presents the inevitable sufferings of two uncongenial marriages in a way that commands absorbed attention. The quietness of the action throughout is one of the greatest charms. Even the most dramatic moments illustrate this, and just because they are subdued, they have increased power.

Seena Owen in this role of the wife, face-to-face with the knowledge that her husband is in love with another woman gives a poignantly repressed preformance. She is the embodiment of the spirit of the entire picture. Gladys Leslie as the sister, M. Moore as the husband and—Joe King as the sister's husband are fine types who respond unerringly to splendid directing. The photography and settings show unusual skill.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" IS AS FRAGRANT AS ROSES

Two eyes "Smilin Through" a green lattice!

The black wing of tragedy brushing by a quaint rose garden.

Here is the contrast of light and shade that gives poignancy to romance.

The eyes danced. So did the smiling little feet of Moonyeen.

And Moonyeen whenever she comes before the camera, wears a sort of golden haze (cast upon her by moonlight and mist—and a clever director) that should surround every woman in love.

Even the little figure of herself that she whimsically sends her lover catches some of this glamour.

Fragrant as roses is 'Smilin' Through"—and from the play that simply was born to become a great picture.

And the mist is not all in the eye of the camera, as those who see Norma Talmadge in her latest and best First National starring vehicle t the Ideal Theatre for three days beginning today, will agree.

HARD WORK WILL PRODUCE WEALTH IN UPPER STATE

HENRY JOHNSON, STATE TREASURER, SAYS NORTHERN COUNTIES WILL BECOME RICH FARMING SECTION

Madison, Wis.—Hard work is the one solution for the problems of Upper Wisconsin, Henry Johnson, state treasurer, says on his return from a tour of the northern counties of the state. The state treasurer who himself cut a farm out of the woods in Oconto county 50 years ago believes that the same problems are confronting settlers now as confronted them half a century ago.

"Upper Wisconsin has vast areas suitable for development into a rich farming country, but only at the cost of real effort on the part of the settlers," Mr. Johnson said. "State aid for this and that and the other thing isn't going to build farm homes and clear land for cultivation.

Land is Waiting

"It seems to me that any settler should be able to go into this undeveloped country and make a home for himself after a few years of hard work. On our trip we saw great stretches of cutover land waiting to be cleared and put under cultivation."

Mr. Johnson said that the experiences of his trip through the upper counties had brought back recollections of his own experiences in clearing a farm home in the Oconto district nearly 50 years ago. He advises settlers of the present that most of their difficulties can be overcome by the same kind of hard work.

Hard Work Needed

"We were a busy lot, living strictly up to the eight hour law, eight in the forenoon and eight in the afternoon," the state treasurer said. "We cleared up our land in the summer and in the winter had plenty of work to do in the woods to earn enough money to tide us over to the next summer's work. We did not have the privilege of banking facilities such as are available now nor did we undertake to run in debt.

"The early settlers had to blaze the way for roads, surveying and cutting them out, digging the stumps, putting in corduroy and bridges. They did not have school houses provided by state aid, nor roads built by the county and state. Land was cleared by grubbing, not with dynamite as at present.

"We managed to make our way in the world and I imagine settlers in those northern counties can do the same by hard work."

Teacher Missing Seven Months Is Back At Home

(By Associated Press)

Albany, Minn., Oct. 21.—Miss Lorraine Schneider, 23 year old school teacher who disappeared from a hotel in Minneapolis and who was later traced to Denver was back at her home near here today after an absence of more than seven months.

Miss Schneider said she had planned to wait until Thanksgiving Day before returning home but that she "could not wait."

Miss Schneider disappeared from Minneapolis because she thought she had killed a man who had attempted to attack her.

Nearly four and one-half million board feet of lumber was used in building the new automobile speedway in Kansas City. If the pieces were laid end to end they would make a wooden chain one thousand miles long.

"A Good Advertiser Is a Safe Borrower"

UNDER the bank cashier's wicket every day pass thousands of dollars in loans to the manufacturers of America. They make automobiles or soap, adding machines or candy, talcum powder or furniture.

Why do these business men borrow large sums with confidence?

Because by persistent Advertising they have each created in the great buying public a demand for a particular automobile, a special brand of candy, a particular make of furniture.

They judge the future by the past. What advertising has done, it will do, and do increasingly. There is an inexhaustible fund of good-will for the advertised trade-marked product. An idea is sold to the public and kept sold by well-planned reiterated Advertising.

Will you give 15 minutes this week for a lifetime of foot comfort?

Probably not one person in ten realizes that there is anything particularly wrong with his feet—and yet army statistics have conclusively shown that at least seven people out of every ten are suffering from some form of foot trouble.

As you study the chart at the top of the page, you will note, perhaps, certain symptoms which have occurred at some time with you.

This week—from now until the close of business next Saturday—is Dr. Scholl's Demonstration Week. During this week an opportunity is offered to you to find out, definitely, positively, the condition of your feet and the corrective methods, if needed, which will bring relief.

If your feet tire easily, if they ache and burn and perspire, if a moderate amount of walking seems to bring excessive fatigue, if you have corns or callouses or bunions, weak arches, "weak foot" or flat foot, or pains in legs and hips that are rheumatic-like in their intensity, you owe it to yourself to find out the real cause of these conditions.

This week, also, we will be glad to present you with the items listed in the coupon below, as long as our supply lasts.

SPECIAL COUPON—FREE!

This coupon will entitle the holder, when signed and presented at our store, to:

1. Dr. Scholl's Corrective Foot Exercise Chart
2. Booklet, "Treatment and Care of the Feet"

S. & R. Club Will Give Benefits To Raise Funds

The S. and R. club of Port Edwards will give a movie benefit at the Port Edwards Auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings, November 3 and 4. They have arranged a very fine program, the feature play being "Nanook of the North." There will also be shown a fine comedy, a Pathe News reel and a movie for the children, "A Modern Golden Locks" or "The Three Bears". Proceeds from this entertainment will be used by the S. and R. Club for Welfare work.

Service Is Aim

While "S. and R." stands for Study and Recreation, the club's real aim is to be of service and benefit to the community by doing welfare work among families who are in need. They have shown this by their good work in the community. Every Christmas for the past several years, they have filled baskets with food and toys to be given to needy families in the community. Miss Molly B. Smith, community nurse at Port Edwards, has aided the club a great deal in this line by helping them keep in touch with the needy families.

Aided Wounded Soldiers

The S. and R. Club of Port Edwards was the first club in this community to make a service flag during the late war. They were also the first club to start work for the French wounded during the war, and were also active in Red Cross work and other patriotic activities.

R. A. Peterson Talks Before Nekoosa Chamber On Monday

At the regular Chamber of Commerce meeting at Nekoosa Monday noon, R. A. Peterson gave a talk on "Relations Between the Farmer and Business Man." He stated that the business man should help the farmer to get the best price for his products. He states that this could be done by getting in more buyers so that the competition would be more keen. Another plan was that the farmers form an association and send the products direct.

The committee on cooperative creamery reported that they believed a creamery would be a good proposition for Nekoosa and that the best thing to do now would be to take inventory of the towns in the community.

WEST SARATOGA

This vicinity was well represented at the bridge celebration in Wisconsin Rapids on Wednesday. Everyone reported a most delightful time.

Mr. and Mrs. Spence Abbot spent Thursday at the L. R Hammond home and were accompanied by Pratt Dawes who has been spending the past two weeks visiting relatives at Strongs Prairie.

Frank Leavens of Neenah and A. U. Marvin of Nekoosa were callers at the Wm. Nicholaus home Tuesday.

The potatoes will all be harvested this week in this neighborhood but the market price does not pay for the work.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Hammond were Wisconsin Rapids shoppers Saturday evening. They were accompanied home by Mrs. P. B. Hayes who spent the week end here.

Floyd Losey spent Sunday and Monday with friends and relatives at Red Granite and Colonia. He returned by way of Kellner to bring his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Ely back home.

Will Yusten spent a few days at the Will Ross home this wek.

Tony Yeager and family spent the week end at the home of Mrs. Ella Nobles.

Jess Westover and family were Sunday visitors at the John Westover home.

John Manske and family spent the week end at their summer home.

Mrs. Joe Berard was a Wisconsin Rapids shopper Monday.

HARD WORK WILL PRODUCE WEALTH IN UPPER STATE

HENRY JOHNSON, STATE TREASURER, SAYS NORTHERN COUNTIES WILL BECOME RICH FARMING SECTION

Madison, Wis.—Hard work is the one solution for the problems of Upper Wisconsin, Henry Johnson, state treasurer, says on his return from a tour of the northern counties of the state. The state treasurer who has 68 cut a farm out of the woods in Oconto county 50 years ago believes that the same problems are confronting settlers now as confronted them half a century ago.

"Upper Wisconsin has vast areas suitable for development into a rich farming country, but only at the cost of real effort on the part of the settlers," Mr. Johnson said. "State aid for this and that and the other thing, isn't going to build farm homes and clear land for cultivation.

Land is Waiting

"It seems to me that any settler should be able to go into this undeveloped country and make a home for himself after a few years of hard work. On our trip we saw great stretches of cutover land waiting to be cleared and put under cultivation."

Mr. Johnson said that the experiences of his trip through the upper counties had brought back recollections of his own experiences in clearing a farm home in the Oconto district nearly 50 years ago. He advises settlers of the present that most of their difficulties can be overcome by the same kind of hard work.

Hard Work Needed

"We were a busy lot, living strictly up to the eight hour law, eight in the forenoon and eight in the afternoon," the state treasurer said. "We cleared up our land in the summer and in the winter had plenty of work to do in the woods to earn enough money to tide us over to the next summer's work. We did not have the privilege of banking facilities such as are available now nor did we undertake to run in debt.

"The early settlers had to blaze the way for roads, surveying and cutting them out, digging the stumps, putting in corduroy and bridges. They did not have school houses provided by state aid, nor roads built by the county and state. Land was cleared by grubbing, not with dynamite as at present.

"We managed to make our way in the world and I imagine settlers in those northern counties can do the same by hard work."

Teacher Missing Seven Months Is Back At Home

(By Associated Press)

Albany, Minn., Oct. 21. Miss Lorraine Schneider, 23 year old school teacher who disappeared from a hotel in Minneapolis and who was later traced to Denver was back at her home near here today after an absence of more than seven months.

Miss Schneider said she had planned to wait until Thanksgiving Day before returning home but that she "could not wait."

Miss Schneider disappeared from Minneapolis because she thought she had killed a man who had attempted to attack her.

Nearly four and one-half million board feet of lumber was used in building the new automobile speedway in Kansas City. If the pieces were laid end to end they would make a wooden chain one thousand miles long.

Marquette Gridders Meet Creighton Team Saturday

Milwaukee, Wis.—Marquette University football team is training into shape for the only out of town game of their 1922 schedule which will be played next Saturday at Omaha against Creighton university. This is the first major game the local college has participated in this year.

Saturday's game with the United States Technical Air school here caused no injuries in the Marquette team and gave Coach Murray a chance to work out the kinks for the big games which are to follow during the next few weeks.

It was said that Dilwig and Fisher two players injured a week or two ago will probably play in the remaining games of the season, if their injuries are not aggravated further.

"A Good Advertiser Is a Safe Borrower"

UNDER the bank cashier's wicket every day pass thousands of dollars in loans to the manufacturers of America. They make automobiles or soap, adding machines or candy, talcum powder or furniture.

Why do these business men borrow large sums with confidence?

Because by persistent Advertising they have each created in the great buying public a demand for a particular automobile, a special brand of candy, a particular make of furniture.

They judge the future by the past. What advertising has done, it will do, and do increasingly. There is an inexhaustible fund of good-will for the advertised trade-marked product. An idea is sold to the public and kept sold by well-planned reiterated Advertising.

Will you give 15 minutes this week for a lifetime of foot comfort?

Probably not one person in ten realizes that there is anything particularly wrong with his feet—and yet army statistics have conclusively shown that at least seven people out of every ten are suffering from some form of foot trouble.

As you study the chart at the top of the page, you will note, perhaps, certain symptoms which have occurred at some time with you.

This week—from now until the close of business next Saturday—is Dr. Scholl's Demonstration Week. During this week an opportunity is offered to you to find out, definitely, positively, the condition of your feet and the corrective methods, if needed, which will bring relief.

If your feet tire easily, if they ache and burn and perspire, if a moderate amount of walking seems to bring excessive fatigue, if you have corns or callouses or bunions, weak arches, "weak foot" or flat foot, or pains in legs and hips that are rheumatic-like in their intensity, you owe it to yourself to find out the real cause of these conditions.

This week, also, we will be glad to present you with the items listed in the coupon below, as long as our supply lasts.

SPECIAL COUPON—FREE!

This coupon will entitle the holder, when signed and presented at our store, to:

1. Dr. Scholl's Corrective Foot Exercise Chart
2. Booklet, "Treatment and Care of the Feet"
3. One sample of Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads and, if desired by the undersigned, a complete foot and shoe trouble analysis and demonstration.
